COME AND SEE US.

HEADQUARTERS, IRON STORE, CENTRAL COR.

JANESVILLE, WIS., June 15, 1884.

The Republican State Central Committee has opened convenient and commodious headquarters on Wisconsin street, near the postoffice, in Milwaukee. All republicans, and especially those of our own state, are cordially invited to call upon them. All republican papers published in the state, and many of the leading journals of the country, will be on file.

Come and see us. H. A. TAYLOR, CHM.

C. M. P. TAYLOR, SEC.

Please note the fact that the Arthur men do no kicking.

A flower barrel is what the democrats want in the coming campaign.

When Blaine takes the stump the democrats will take to the woods.

The "independents" have thrown logic to the dogs in pronouncing against Mr.

Blaine.

They say Flower is the coming man.

But who is Flower, the country will ask.

Well, he is distinguished because he is handsome and courted because he is rich.

The democrats are beginning to see that it won't do to trifle with the nomination of Blaine. Of all the men in the country he will give the democrats the hardest battle.

About the bolt in Massachusetts, the Daily Mail of Lowell, says, "No republican paper in Massachusetts, outside of Boston, has announced its inability to support the nominee."

A saloon-keeper in Chicago expects to net $15,000 from the two national conventions. He made $1,000 during the republican convention, and will make the other $14,000 while the democratic convention is in session.

Those who fancy that the republican strength lies in democratic weakness will learn this fall that the republican party is strong because it has public confidence, the best ticket, and the most votes.

The republican campaigners will be joined by Gail Hamilton and Mrs. Logan.

Gail is a host in time of need, and Mrs.

Logan can make more men believe as she does than any other woman in the country.

Bills have been introduced in the house of representatives to give honorably discharged soldier or sailor 100 acres of land, and for the erection of a home for union and confederate soldiers at Denver. There is no hope for them to pass this session.

There is a woman in New York who promises to give her check for $100,000 if Mr. Flower is nominated for the presidency by the democrats. His beauty is known of all women, and there is no doubt he will carry the full female vote of New York and Brooklyn.

The situation in the democratic camp is expressed by the Boston Traveller as follows: "There will be booming for fibre and finger nails. He always flies the American flag, and the American eagle perches on his shoulder. To the heroic antagonist of the Union, the United States, to England, his dogs never lowered, not even in ceremony.

Perhaps if this item was shown to the Massachusetts committee of one hundred independents, it would soothe their aching hearts and chase the gloom from their minds.

PRESIDENT BASCOM ON MADISON.

Some three months ago the Gazette printed an editorial on the serious charges that President Bascom, of the State university, had made against the morals of Madison. It was then charged that Bascom's published letters, in which he severely rebuked the city, tended to injure the place and keep parents from sending their children to the university. The matter created a good deal of excitement in Madison, and of course it met with deserved contempt and worthy opposition. It was thought that the chilling rebuke President Bascom then received would induce him to attend to his duties as president of the university, and let the government of the city of Madison alone.

But he has kept on with his misbehaving, and now the report comes from that city that Mr. Keyes, a member of the board of university regents, will present formal charges against Bascom, in which is said that "he has written communications to public journals traducing the good reputation of Madison and advertising the university as a place unfit to send youth to, because of the immorality of the capital city; that he meddles in local politics in Madison in a most offensive and arbitrary manner, that he is the originator of the presented liquor war in Madison, advocates a system of spies and arrays class against class in fierce local turmoil; that he is an agitator and an idea enthusiast not fit for the high and dignified position of head of a great state educational institution."

The president is not accomplishing anything by his war against the morals of Madison; but is rather making matters worse. He not only libels the city, but injures the reputation of the university.

A WOMAN AS A POLITICIAN.

One of the brightest women in this country, and certainly one of the shrewd-est political workers in Washington, is the wife of General John A. Logan. She has fought several campaigns for her husband, and has always come out successful excepting in 1875, when her far-reaching influence and fascinating blan-chments could not save John from going down in defeat in the same week that Zach Chandler and Matt Carpenter were rejected by their states. But six years before, and four years after his defeat, she had fought splendid battles for her husband and had been successful, but '75 was an off year for certain republican senators, and the devoted wife of John A. Logan was overpowered by a strange combination of circumstances.

When the national republican convention was being held in Chicago, she kept a sharp eye on the proceedings, and watched with deep solitude the chances of General Logan.

Between the third and the fourth ball-lot, which was a critical moment in the convention, Senator Collum, who was a delegate and the manager of Logan's campaign, telegraphed Logan that the Illinois delegate had done all they could for him, and desired to know what was his pleasure. In the dispatch was the question, "Shall we swing for Blaine?"

The general was not in the capital at the time, and not a moment could be lost, as the convention was preparing to call the roll of states on the fourth ballot, so Mrs.

Logan opened the message, and without a minute's delay or a moment's hesitation, she sent over the wires back to Chicago, "Yes," and in ten minutes thereafter the vote of Illinois was received for

Blaine.

The general returned to the senate chamber in a few minutes, and when the question was wired from Chicago, "Will you take the vice-presidency?" he hesi-tated, as he would rather remain in the senate, but the wife was the manager of his political fortune, and instantly she inspired the answer, "I am in the hands of my friends." If the general does not reach the prize he so much desires, it will not be from want of matchless devotion and consummate skill on the part of his wife.

THE INDEPENDENT KICKERS.

In every campaign there are some whose minds are never at ease unless they kick at the presidential nominations.

They kick because they have political dyspepsia. They see no good in any prominent leader, no matter who he may be, and his record is not exactly fine enough to suit the righteous idea of those who desire to do so much in educating and reforming the party. The so-called bolting of Blaine is not stranger, neither has it a disastrous look about it.

In every campaign there happens to be some one who sees that the party has made a fatal mistake, but the party goes on all the same, makes its nominations and wins success. The "committee of one hundred" in Massachusetts, who say that they will vote for Cleveland in preference to Blaine, is not a new committee with new names. These names have been seen in other campaigns on the regular list of quadrennial kickers. They happened to be republican only at lucid intervals, but generally they will be found among the free-traders.

They met to mourn over the condition of the country in 1871, and the year following they joined the democrats in supporting Horace Greeley. The same crowd got together again in 1876, and demanded the nomination of Brewster, and in kicking they got Hayes. They kicked again in 1880 against Grant and Blaine, and in 1884 have thrown themselves entirely onto the traces regarding Arthur or Blaine. They turn up every four years, being pretty much the same old hundred.

They met in Boston the other day to shed a few tears over the nomination of Blaine and Logan. There were a few new mourners present, but substantially it was the same old crowd. They sighed over the short-comings of the republican party, denounced the platform because it wasn't for free-trade, and criticized Blaine because he was not like Caesar's wife, above suspicion.

If this committee of one hundred would resolve to take themselves into the democratic party, the republicans would esteem it a special favor. The democrats would be helped to the number of one hundred votes in Massachusetts, and besides, the republican ticket would be greatly benefitted thereby.

The Illinois "Black Jack" Up Among the Pines.

Reception and Speeches—The Letters of Acceptance—Blaine's Already Written—The Leaders Confering.

Augusta, Me., June 17.—Gen. Logan and Senator Hale arrived from Washington at 5:15 Monday afternoon. Quite a crowd, among whom war veterans were prominent, greeted the party at the depot and cheered Gen. Logan when he alighted.

Before he could reach a carriage Gen. Logan's hand was seized by a crowd of the veterans greeted him with shouts of "You're the man for us!" "You'll give us a good administration," etc. Cheers were given again as the party drove away. They went directly to Mr. Blaine's house. There was no formal greeting there. Mr. Blaine received his guests privately, and after a brief rest, Mr. Blaine, Gen. Logan, Senator Hale, and Walker Blaine went off to ride. The banquet of August's celebration in June was fully appreciated, and politics apparently was banished for the time. At 5 o'clock in the evening a procession was formed downtown, and a great crowd marched to Mr.

Blaine's house. A band played a solemn and then the crowd called for Gen. Logan.

The Governor's carriage came to the porch, and made a short speech in eulogy of the candidate for vice president.

Then Gen. Logan appeared, and was vigorously cheered. He said in response to the greeting, "I most fully appreciate the kindness of the people of Maine, and I am truly glad to meet so many citizens of Augusta. I must confess I feel embarrassed in attempting to say anything after listening to what has been said by Gen. Logan. It is true that the soldiers of Maine in the war greatly outnumbered those of the other states, and I feel that I have a duty to perform in the preservation of this great nation. Behind me stand the loyal citizens of this grand republic, giving their support and prayers, with their hearts full of hope for their success. And, as liberty first found birth on the Atlantic slope, will I say that I have found true hearts for its preservation, not only of this country, but of the entire world. I feel that I have a duty to

ervation, not only of this country, but of the Five candidates appeared before the board of examiners yesterday as candidates for appointment to the United States naval academy at Annapolis. One was rejected for physical disability, and one on account of over age. Of the other three, two were residents of this city Albert Davies, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Davies, and John Richardson, son of Hon. and Mrs. Hamilton Richardson and John D. Cameron, of Whitewater. The examination was continued late last evening, and has not yet been concluded. Son and H. E. Judd, of Edgerton, and enjoyed a pleasant evening. They assisted in conferring the initiatory degree upon twenty-two candidates, after which refreshments were had, and the Janesville party returned home feeling well.

People who live in the country, and because they live in the country are able to chase around a hay-mow after fresh eggs, are about the only class of people whose avidity is worth considering on the freshness of the fruit in question. Your groceryman may be ever so honest; he may possess a faculty for keeping new maple sugar twelve months in the year; in fact, he may be as capable as twenty-five hours of close attention to business, eighteen hours a day, can make him; but when he undertakes to tell you what he knows about eggs, you sympathize with him and feel that he has wandered off into a subject altogether beyond his comprehension.

How to keep eggs fresh the year round is a conundrum. If you want a satisfactory answer call on Messrs. Murry & Treat in the basement under Davies Bros store, on West Milwaukee street, and hear what they have to say about Hines egg compound. You can hunt for fresh eggs in a jar in January, with as satisfactory results as you would experience by waiting for an old hen in a hay mow late in the season. Try a can.

"Bozents" at Prontice & Evenson's.

Municipal Court.

Dolan pleaded guilty to the charge, and the judge imposed a penalty of twenty-five dollars and the costs, amounting in all to $27.45, which was promptly paid. Pell, however, pleaded not guilty, and on his motion the case was adjourned for trial to June 20th, at nine o'clock.

Ald. Burnham then introduced the following resolution:
